REVIEW OF LEGISLATION OF 1919.

The objects of this bulletin, containing the twentieth annual summary of Federal and other game laws and regulations, are to present the provisions of game legislation in convenient form for sportsmen and others, and to show its general condition and trend from year to year.¹

Legislative sessions were held in 44 States, in 41 of which more or less extensive changes were made in the game laws. While the number of game laws enacted does not equal the total number passed in other years when most of the legislatures were in session, the volume compares favorably with records of previous years, owing to the number of States which amended and codified their game legislation. Arkansas, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio, Texas, and Utah passed general measures revising their game laws. Considerable progress was made along the line of harmonizing State legislation with the migratory-bird treaty act and the regulations thereunder. In South Carolina the Federal regulations were adopted as the law of the State. In New York the seasons for Long Island, and in Arkansas, Illinois, Minnesota, Ohio, South Dakota, and Texas open seasons or other provisions, were made to conform to the Federal regulations.

BIG GAME.

Some very beneficial legislation for the protection of big game was enacted this year, among the most noteworthy of which was the action of Maine in repealing the provision which allowed residents to export deer. Federal investigations disclosed that residents of Maine and New Hampshire had been illegally shipping large numbers of deer to the Boston markets, and the magnitude of this illegal traffic, as indicated by the convictions secured in Federal courts, was doubtlessly instrumental in initiating this legislation. Another most important provision of the legislation in Maine, and one of far-reaching consequences, was that prohibiting the use of deer and moose in lumber camps. The deer seasons were shortened from 5 to 15 days in Maine, New Mexico, Vermont, and Wyoming. Close seasons throughout the year were prescribed for does in Missouri and Wyoming, and for all deer in Ohio and West Virginia. The limits on deer were reduced from two to one a season in New York and Ontario. Nova Scotia lengthened the season on deer one week, and New York, Texas, and Vermont repealed laws protecting does.

Saskatchewan closed the Province to elk hunting, and West Virginia continued the close term on these animals until 1927; Wyoming shortened the open season two weeks, reduced the limit from two to one a season, and repealed the provision permitting a resident to kill one additional elk under a special $10 license. Idaho lengthened the season two weeks on elk in counties having an open season, and Montana modified the seasons in certain counties and opened a few counties to elk hunting which heretofore had been closed.

Mention should here be made of the program evolved by the Forest Service and the Bureau of Biological Survey for the conservation and maintenance of elk in the Yellowstone National Park region. Here is found the greatest aggregate of large game now in existence in such a limited area within the United States. The program is the result of investigations by these two bureaus of the Department of Agriculture, made with a view to devising a practicable plan to conserve the remnant of this once numerous and widely distributed noble game animal.¹

Maine permitted moose to be hunted during the last ten days of November, the first open season on these animals since 1915; and Nova Scotia shortened the open season two weeks. Wyoming shortened the season on sheep six weeks and extended the term of protection on moose and antelope until 1925. Alberta lengthened the open season two weeks on mountain sheep and goats.

SEASONS ON GAME BIRDS.

The grouse season was closed in New Mexico, Texas, Vermont, and Wyoming; in Maine and Ohio existing open seasons were shortened; and in West Virginia the number of grouse allowed to be taken in a season was reduced from 25 to 20. In Michigan and Pennsylvania, where the seasons on ruffed grouse were closed in 1918, hunting is again permitted this year. Alberta lengthened the season on grouse and ptarmigan two weeks.

Arkansas and South Carolina each shortened the open season on quail one month, and West Virginia reduced the limit from 96 to 60 a season. In Idaho the season on sage hens was opened throughout the State during the last two weeks in August; Wyoming shortened the season two weeks and reduced the daily bag limit from 6 to 4; and Oregon lengthened by two weeks the season east of the Cascades. Wild turkeys were protected until 1921 in West Virginia and the seasons were shortened one month in Missouri and from 15 days to 6 weeks in New Mexico. South Carolina lengthened the season two weeks and established a limit of 20 turkeys a season. Missouri provided that 100 petitioning householders may obtain a referendum vote at a general election upon the question of a 2-year close season on quail in any county.

ADMINISTRATION.

One of the most important features of the game legislation of 1919 was the effort to maintain efficient organizations for the enforcement of the laws. A very general effort was made to keep pace with the increased cost of living, which necessitated the payment of a living wage for warden work and competition with salaries and wages paid by private concerns. No less than 11 States—Connecticut, Idaho, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Texas, Vermont, and Wyoming—authorized increases in compensation for State wardens or deputies. In Indiana and Ohio State game officials were authorized to fix the compensation of all their employees, and in New Jersey the salaries of certain employees of the board of fish and game commissioners are required to be fixed in accordance with schedules furnished by the civil-service commission.

Idaho, in keeping with the movement in many States, created nine departments in which to centralize and systematize the civil administration of State affairs, and placed the fish and game bureau in the department of law enforcement. In West Virginia a $1 State-wide resident license law was enacted to replace the 1915 act requiring $3 licenses of residents hunting outside their counties of residence. The $1 resident license, with an exemption to landowners, tenants, and members of their families hunting on their own lands, has proved popular throughout the country, is not burdensome on the individual hunter, and invariably insures financial support for adequate warden service, restocking, and other lines of legitimate game conservation. West Virginia made deep inroads into the game and fish protection fund maintained by receipts from the sale of hunting licenses, by providing that 20 per cent thereof should be expended in restocking streams with fishes, and 10 per cent set aside for bounties on certain animals and birds. These diversions, together with the cost of issuing licenses and collecting the fees therefor, will serve to reduce the amount available for game protection to about 50 per cent of the receipts from the sale of hunting licenses.

South Carolina made the resident hunting-license law applicable throughout the State. Texas increased the fee for resident hunting licenses from $1.75 to $2 and repealed the provision permitting hunting without a license in counties adjoining the county of residence. Maine prescribed a 25-cent registration certificate for residents, good so long as the holder remains a citizen of the State. Utah abolished the distinction between resident and nonresident hunters and prescribed a $2 license fee for citizens of the United States hunting in that State. Legislation along this line has been advocated for many years by prominent sportsmen, but Utah is the first State to adopt it.

In Indiana the fish and game interests were placed under the jurisdiction of the newly created department of conservation. The four conservation commissioners and the chiefs of divisions are empowered to administer oaths, subpoena witnesses, and to require public officials, corporations, associations, and individuals to produce books, records, and information for lawful purposes under the act. The fish and game protection and propagation fund was continued, but funds therein in excess of $50,000 are to revert to the State treasury at the end of any fiscal year.

GAME REFUGES AND PRESERVES.

Marked progress was made in the establishment of game sanctuaries, and no less than a dozen States enacted legislation with reference to this very important factor in game conservation. All State lands in Alabama, State, county, and municipal parks in Delaware, and all school sections and educational lands in Nebraska were declared game refuges and all hunting thereon prohibited. Minnesota prohibited hunting in or within three miles of the corporate limits of Duluth, Minneapolis, and St. Paul. Special refuges created include the Catalina Mountain preserve in Arizona; the Colorado State Game Refuge, in the vicinity of the Rocky Mountain National Park; the game and fish preserve in Loudon County, Tenn.; the Dixie, Fish Lake, Heaston, Cache, and Strawberry Preserves in Utah, and the Splitrock special game-animal preserve in Wyoming. Vermont authorized the commissioner to establish such game refuges and sanctuaries as are recommended by the United States Biological Survey, and a tentative selection of a preserve has already been made by the bureau. The boundaries of the Gallatin preserve in Montana and those of the Big Horn refuge in Wyoming were modified to some extent. In Oregon and Illinois the State authorities were authorized to establish refuges by contract on private lands, and in South Dakota to acquire public or private property for the protection and propagation of game birds.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

California, Illinois, Maine, and Minnesota prohibited hunting from automobiles or motor vehicles, and California and Michigan made it illegal also to hunt or shoot game birds from airplanes. Colorado prohibited aliens from hunting or owning a shotgun, rifle, or pistol. Illinois prohibited the shipment of game by parcel post. Indiana authorized the department of conservation to encourage and assist in the organization and establishment of fish and game protective associations in the State. In New York provision was made for registering and licensing guides in the forest-preserve counties, and such guides are required to comply with rules and regulations prescribed by the commissioner. Vermont provided for establishing around commercial orchards having an area of 10 acres or more open zones in which deer may be killed at any time.

SUMMARY OF LAWS RELATING TO SEASONS, LICENSES, LIMITS, SALE, AND EXPORT.

The dates of open seasons for migratory game birds shown under the various States and Provinces are the times when these birds may be hunted without violating either State laws or Federal regulations.¹ Federal regulations now prohibit shooting from sunset to half an hour before sunrise.

The regulations under the Federal migratory-bird treaty act prohibit throughout the United States the killing at any time of the following birds:

Band-tailed pigeon; little brown, sandhill, and whooping cranes; wood duck, swans; curlews, willet, upland plover, and all shorebirds (except the black-bellied and golden plovers, Wilson snipe or jack-snipe, woodcock, and the greater and lesser yellowlegs); bobolinks,² catbirds, chickadees, cuckoos, flickers, flycatchers, grosbeaks, hummingbirds, kinglets, martins, meadowlarks, nighthawks or bull-bats, nuthatches, orioles, robins, shrikes, swallows, swifts, tanagers, titmice, thrushes, vireos, warblers, waxwings, whip-poor-wills, woodpeckers, and wrens, and all other perching birds which feed entirely or chiefly on insects; and also auks, auklets, bitterns, fulmars, gannets, grebes, guillemots, gulls, herons, jaegers, loons, murre, petrels, puffins, shearwaters, and terns.

² See order of the Secretary permitting bobolinks or reedbirds to be killed in a few States for the protection of rice crops in the south, p. 77.

In some States certain days of the week constitute close seasons throughout the time in which killing is permitted. Hunting on Sunday is prohibited in all States and Provinces east of the one hundred and fifth meridian except Illinois, Louisiana, Michigan, Texas, Wisconsin, and Québec. Mondays constitute a close season for waterfowl locally in Maryland and North Carolina; and certain other week days for waterfowl in several favorite ducking grounds in Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina. Hunting is prohibited on election day in Maryland in Allegany, Baltimore, Cecil, Charles, Frederick, and Harford Counties; and when snow is on the ground in New Jersey, Delaware, Virginia, and Maryland.

The county laws of North Carolina, which are too numerous to be included satisfactorily, are not incorporated in the following summary, which otherwise may be regarded as a practically complete résumé of the regulations now in force.

The migratory-bird treaty-act regulations permit the possession of migratory game birds during the open season and the first 10 days following the close of the season. This provision has been considered in connection with State laws, and when migratory game birds may be legally possessed under Federal regulations and State laws during any part of the close season, it has been stated under the heading "Bag limits and possession." Possession of nonmigratory game during the close season is generally prohibited by State laws, but when an extension of a few days or a special season is provided for either possession or sale, attention is called thereto.

Under the Federal migratory-bird treaty act the sale of all migratory game birds is prohibited throughout the United States except birds taken for scientific or propagating purposes, or waterfowl raised on farms or preserves under proper permit from the Secretary of Agriculture.

In stating the open seasons¹ the plan of the New York law, to include the first and the last days thereof, has been followed. The difficulty of securing absolute accuracy in a statement of the seasons is very great, but the following summaries have been submitted to the proper State or Provincial game commissioners for approval, and are believed to be free from material errors. Seasons which apply only to special counties are placed to the left of the column containing those for the State in general. Species (except migratory birds protected throughout each year by Federal regulation) on which the season is closed for a term of years or an indefinite period are grouped under the term "No open season." Provisions of State laws prohibiting hunting at night, between sunset and sunrise, or during certain hours, are not included.

Persons are advised to secure from State game commissioners¹ the full text of game laws in States where hunting is contemplated.

CANADA.

Under the act of August 29, 1917, to give effect to the migratory-bird treaty between the United States and Great Britain the governor general in council has promulgated regulations for the protection of migratory birds in Canada.¹ These regulations restrict the hunting of migratory game birds not protected throughout the year to a period not exceeding 3½ months between September 1 and January 15, inclusive, in all except the Maritime Provinces, where the 3½ months open season on shorebirds opens August 15 and closes November 30. Other provisions of the regulations also conform to the terms of the treaty.

In 1919 the above-mentioned act was amended so as to authorize the governor general in council to make regulations fixing the bag limits on migratory game birds, and prescribing the manner in which they may be taken and the appliances that may be used therefor.

Canada also has a general law prohibiting export of deer (except those raised on private preserves), wild turkey, quail, partridge, prairie fowl, and woodcock, but permitting each nonresident to export two deer (except in those Provinces further limiting the number) in a year at certain ports within 15 days after the close of the open season, under permit of the collector of customs

The ports of export are Halifax and Yarmouth, Nova Scotia; Macadam Junction, New Brunswick; Quebec and Montreal, Quebec; Ottawa, Kingston, Niagara Falls, Fort Erie, Windsor, Sault Ste. DISPOSITION OF GAME RAISED IN CAPTIVITY.

Regulations have been adopted under the Federal migratory-bird treaty act to permit the propagation and sale of migratory waterfowl,¹ thus paving the way for the upbuilding in this country of an industry from which many persons have been barred by lack of suitable legislation. It has been demonstrated that game animals and birds, especially certain species of migratory waterfowl, will yield satisfactory returns when propagated on farms and preserves. It is believed that the demand will far exceed the supply for a number of years, in view of the increased restrictions on the sale of native wild game and of the fact that migratory birds can no longer be sold on the market anywhere in the United States unless they have been reared in captivity in accordance with the law and regulations. The Department of Agriculture, acting in conjunction with State game officials, will aid so far as possible in establishing this industry, both in preparing drafts of suitable laws to be enacted by the various States and in assisting breeders to obtain eggs and breeding stock. The Department is not and never has been in a position to furnish breeding stock or the eggs of any species of game bird for propagating purposes, contrary to frequent reports in the press, but it will assist legitimate enterprises by granting the necessary permits to propagate migratory waterfowl in captivity and to take birds or eggs for propagating purposes. Reasonable and proper regulations of Federal and State Governments will permit domesticated game to reach the market for consumption at all seasons and at the same time will prevent the infringement of laws to conserve the supply of native game.

Federal regulations: Under permit from the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and subject to the provisions of State laws relating thereto, migratory waterfowl may be possessed, sold, and transported at any time for propagating purposes and the unplucked carcasses and the plucked carcasses with heads attached of propagated birds killed in any manner, except that they may be killed by shooting only during the open season for waterfowl in the State where taken, may be sold and transported at any time to any person for actual consumption, or to the keeper of a hotel, restaurant, or boarding house, retail dealer in meat or game, or a club, for sale or service to their patrons, who may possess such carcasses for actual consumption without a Federal permit; provided, that no migratory waterfowl killed by shooting shall be bought or sold unless each bird before attaining the age of four weeks shall have had removed from the web of one foot a portion thereof in the form of a "V" for identification purposes. (See Reg. 8, p. 74, for full details and requirements.)

About two-thirds of the States now have some special provision regulating possession, sale, or export of game raised in captivity. The following table giving a digest of the various State laws on the subject serves to show the lack of uniformity and the need of additional legislation to attain the results desired:

¹ Waterfowl are the only migratory birds that are permitted to be raised in captivity, and permits therefor must be obtained from the Secretary of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., in accordance with the regulations. (See pp. 74-75.)

- California: Game raised in captivity under breeder's license (fee, $2.50) may be sold at any time for breeding purposes or may be sold under license and regulations of commissioners for food when properly tagged (fee, 3 cents a tag). CONVENTION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN FOR THE PROTECTION OF MIGRATORY BIRDS IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.¹

[39 Stat., 1702.]

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a convention between the United States of America and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the protection of migratory birds in the United States and Canada was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Washington, on the sixteenth day of August, one thousand nine hundred and sixteen, the original of which convention is word for word as follows:

Whereas many species of birds in the course of their annual migrations traverse certain parts of the United States and the Dominion of Canada; and

Whereas many of these species are of great value as a source of food or in destroying insects which are injurious to forests and forage plants on the public domain, as well as to agricultural crops, in both the United States and Canada, but are nevertheless in danger of extermination through lack of adequate protection during the nesting season or while on their way to and from their breeding grounds;

The United States of America and His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, being desirous of saving from indiscriminate slaughter and of insuring the preservation of such migratory birds as are either useful to man or are harmless, have resolved to adopt some uniform system of protection which

Canada, by an act of Parliament approved August 29, 1917, gave full effect to this convention, and promulgated regulations thereunder May 11, 1918.

The Constitution of the United States contains the following provision in regard to treaties:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land; and he judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding." them respectively, but such permits shall lapse, or may be canceled, at any time when, in the opinion of said authorities, the particular exigency has passed, and no birds killed under this article shall be shipped, sold, or offered for sale.
